

Home > Infotech > Asian

Alcatel-Lucent Wins Frost & Sullivan Asia Pacific ICT Award

EFY News Network

(Saturday, June 06, 2009 2:14:10 PM)

Alcatel-Lucent has been conferred with the 'Optical Vendor of the Year' award in Asia Pacific.

Saturday, June 06, 2009: Alcatel-Lucent has been awarded the 'Optical Vendor of the Year' in Asia Pacific at this year's Frost & Sullivan Asia Pacific ICT Awards. The 2009 award also marks Alcatel-Lucent's second consecutive win in the category. The award recognises Alcatel-Lucent's exemplary innovation, growth and performance in the Asia Pacific carrier network optical infrastructure market.

"Alcatel-Lucent would like to extend our appreciation to our peers, the organisers and our customers for making this memorable win possible," said Sean Dolan, president, Alcatel-Lucent Asia-Pacific. "To achieve this despite a challenging global economic climate and business environment makes it even more special, and is a testament to Alcatel-Lucent's outstanding efforts and progress in this highly significant industry segment."

"Alcatel-Lucent's strong product portfolio offering end-to-end optical network solutions has ensured that the company remained the optical vendor of choice among Asian operators. Last year the company successfully implemented T-MPLS and introduced its zero touch photonics technology designed to help service providers minimise operating costs. As a result of its innovative solutions and timely launches, Alcatel-Lucent managed to secure significant contracts in key Asia-Pacific markets in 2008," said Adeel Najam, industry analyst, Frost & Sullivan.